Vehicles Are Home Away From Home

Keeping Cars Clean a Problem for UNO Students

Anthony Welsh
Staff Writer

It has all the comforts of home: food, clothing and shelter. But when all of life's necessities are kept in a car, keeping it clean can be a problem.

"It's not a problem, it's a job," Mark Anderson, UNO senior philosophy major, said.

When he goes from school to work and then home, Anderson needs his school supplies, work tools, as well as his paint ball equipment, with him all the time. "With all of the stuff in my car and what I use it for, you could definitely say that I live out of my car."

Anderson admits he has messy car, but he tries to keep the front seat clean so other people have room to ride with him.

"Because I am always using the stuff that is in my car, eliminating stuff from it would be difficult," Anderson said. He said solutions to the problems would be buying a second vehicle or quitting school.

Anderson does not believe that his dirty car

Veterans Question Holiday Break

Tony Dreibus
Senior Staff Writer

UNO students received yesterday off this semester in honor of Martin Luther King, Jr., but a controversy has arisen about whether or not the university should have closed.

Certain veterans groups have expressed concern about the fact that Veterans day, which is celebrated

Nov. 11, was not selected as a day off for students.

"I was appalled to see that we get Martin Luther King day off...yet we don't get Veterans Day off," said Mark Ermeling, a UNO freshman who spent five years serving in the Navy.

"If you are going to give a day off that honors one man, why not give a day off that honors all those who have served in uniform, and the many who never returned from foreign lands," he said.

"Veterans come from all ethnic groups and social classes. So if we are going to honor a particular group or individual, let's honor

Mavs Sweep Air Force

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

On this three-game winning streak, strange things have been happening to the Maverick hockey team.

For example:

In their last three games, they have more wins than in their first 20 (2-18).

Every game has featured at least one fight.

The 4-0 Maverick win Saturday night had a couple oddities with the score. First, the win was the first time this season the Mavericks have won while scoring five goals or fewer. Second, it marks the second time in school history a Maverick goaltender has pitched a shutout. Rodney McLeod first pulled the feat against Alabama-Huntsville in February 1998. That game was also a 4-0 final.

The Mavericks and Falcons have now played six times in the past 18 months. The Mavericks have won the last five games in the series, including all four in Omaha.

Kim Parsons of the UNO Cheer Team celebrates the Maverick hockey team's fourth goal to seal a clean sweep of the Airforce last weekend. The Mavs gave Omaha a 6-3 win on Friday and a 4-0 shutout on Saturday.

Senate Debates Busing

Dustin Pappas
News Editor

Goal setting was a major focal point at the student senate meeting Thursday evening.

Senators convened for the first time with new Student President/Regent Jon Shradar, and introduced topics of concern to the student body.

Some long lasting concerns like parking have not lost their luster. Senators discussed a problem with the operating hours of the bus system. Because the operating hours go until 6 p.m., there has been concern that the bus system does not cater students who take evening courses on campus.

Another topic senators introduced that Shradar supports is the idea to provide more blue emergency lights on campus.

The next Student Senate meeting is Jan. 28 at 7:00 p.m. in the Milo Bail Student Center.

Byrd Hopes To Get UNO Academic Affairs Flying

Ana Merizalde
Staff Writer

In light of UNO's desire to improve this institution, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Derek Hodgson appointed Mark Byrd to head the Institutional Research program last October.

The Academic Affairs Committee felt the decision to appoint Byrd to the head of the department was wise.

Byrd, who is accomplished in upgrading other universities academic, financial, administrative and operational areas, plans to do more of the same for UNO.

"This office, prior to my arrival, their focus was more narrow to my intent," said Byrd. "I'm going to take my background and apply it here. Academic affairs have a group that deal with curriculum. One of the things I'm doing for UNO is strategic planning and global perspective. I help answer questions like 'what does the job market look like?' and 'what is the demand for higher education?'"

In regards to tuition and financial aide, the chances of a drop in cost are slim, however, hopeful.

"I've done quite a bit of work in the field of financial aide. The vice chancellor handles financial aide. If they ask I'll look into it.

Regents Meet in Lincoln to Examine NU System

Smith said task force a priority for NU

Dustin Pappas
News Editor

Just as it would take the aid of a good doctor for a thorough physical check-up, the university is looking outside its walls in order to take an "objective and penetrating look" at its own administrative operations.

At Saturday's University of Nebraska Board of Regents meeting in Lincoln, President L. Dennis Smith announced the creation of a committee to improve the efficiency of the university's non-academic services.

The University of Nebraska Task Force on Administrative Efficiency, chaired by Ron Burns, will examine the university's innersystems and recommend methods of improving service and reducing costs, while not affecting academic affairs.

Smith said in a Jan. 16 news release that the implementation of the "best business practices" into administration are "our highest priorities."

Ron Burns, who is also chairman of Burns Capital Partners of Omaha, looks forward to heading the task force and hopes that it will "strengthen the institution and improve its accountability to students and taxpayers."

The task force will build upon the work of an earlier probe Smith had guided in 1995.

In August of 1995, Smith reported to regents the best practices of the business community and public agencies, and suggested the university adopt the most suitable ones. Since then, Smith's original report has been the backbone to the efforts at upgrading administration processes.

The Gateway is, once again, featuring the "Get To Know Your Campus" feature. Your favorite college newspaper will be printing a place and/or object on campus in every Tuesday issue. It's then your job to locate and/or identify that photo. The answer will be published in the Friday issue.

This week's: Any idea where this room is on campus? One hint: It's close to our hearts.

12 Have Died From Infected Sara Lee Deli Meats, CDC Says

College Press Exchange

The number of deaths traced to contaminated meat from a Sara Lee Corp. processing plant in Michigan has climbed to 12, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday.

The outbreak of Listeria monocytogenes now has been identified in 62 people in 12 states since early August, with five new cases confirmed in Arizona, health officials said.

Nine adults have died and three women suffered miscarriages after eating hot dogs and possibly deli meats containing Listeria bacteria, the federal health agency said. The death toll has tripled from four cases first announced by the CDC on Dec. 22, the day Sara Lee said it would recall more than 300 varieties of meat products processed at its giant Bil Mar Foods facility in Zeeland, Mich.

The CDC has identified two different strains of Listeria from open and unopened packages of franks and deli meats made at the plant. The strain found in deli meats hasn't yet been linked to human illness, said CDC medical epidemiologist Paul Mead.

A spokesman for the Arizona Department of Health Services said the agency is investigating other possible cases of listeriosis that match the rare strain linked to Bil Mar Foods. The one death in Arizona was an unborn child.

Kenneth Moll, a lawyer who is suing Sara Lee on behalf of anyone who has gotten ill on the recalled meats, said he has been contacted by people in seven states not reported by the CDC. He said he has learned of 15 deaths and 325 illness in 12 states.

For The Record

The Jan. 12 issue of The Gateway incorrectly identified the location of a recent UNO Maverick Hockey game. The team played at the Civic Auditorium.

Dole May Seek Republican Nomination, But It's Not Bob

Are Americans ready for a female president?

Eve McLain
Staff Writer

It looks like 1996 GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole is looking to inhabit the White House again, but this time as the first gentleman.

On Jan. 4, Elizabeth Dole announced her resignation from her eight-year post as president of the American Red Cross. It's speculated she is clearing the way for a possible presidential bid in 2000.

Dole, 62, is a Harvard-trained lawyer from North Carolina. Although she has never held an elected office, she has a wide variety of experiences in the federal bureaucracy.

She's served five years as a member of the Federal Trade Commission before joining the Cabinet during the Reagan and Bush years. She is the only woman in U.S. history to hold two Cabinet offices which include Transportation Secretary from 1983 to 1987 and Labor Secretary from 1989 to 1990.

This experience is one reason John Dunn, Chairman of UNO College Republicans, believes Dole would stand a good chance at getting the republican nomination, and if not for president, then for vice-president. But are Americans ready?

"At this point in time, I think they're the most ready they'll ever be," Dunn said.

Kyle Jones, Speaker of the Student Government, not only agrees

America is ready, but supports the idea of having qualified women in the presidential office.

"As the foremost promotes of equality, it is our duty to support the 52 percent of our population who would like to assume greater leadership roles," she said.

She believes this may be one of the best times for a woman to be elected, because this is when republicans will be looking to put someone in office as different from Clinton as possible.

Another possible republican hopeful is former president George Bush's eldest son, Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

Both Dunn and Jones agreed that with Bush in the running, Dole's chances for the nomination would diminish.

"Even if he runs, she poses the only strong threat," Dunn said. He also said there has been a lot of discussion in the party of it being a Bush/Dole ticket which would almost ensure her presidential nomination down the road.

Not all UNO students see this happening, but none of them were willing to go on record with their comments.

In support of his wife, Bob Dole told MSNBC Tuesday night that even though his wife hadn't fully made up her mind to run for president in 2000, he could think of no better way to start the millennium than with a qualified woman as president.

"My view is that the American people are ready for it."

National Spelling Problems Are Curable With 'Kommon Cents'

College Press Exchange

Americans have forgotten how to spell. Need proof?

Take the typical American day. You get up and enjoy your breakfast, maybe some Trix cereal, or if you really don't know how to spell, a few Krispy Kreme donuts.

You get dressed. Don't forget to put on your Soft'n'Dri deodorant.

On your way to work, you stop at the local All-Nite Quicke Mart to buy gas for your Infiniti.

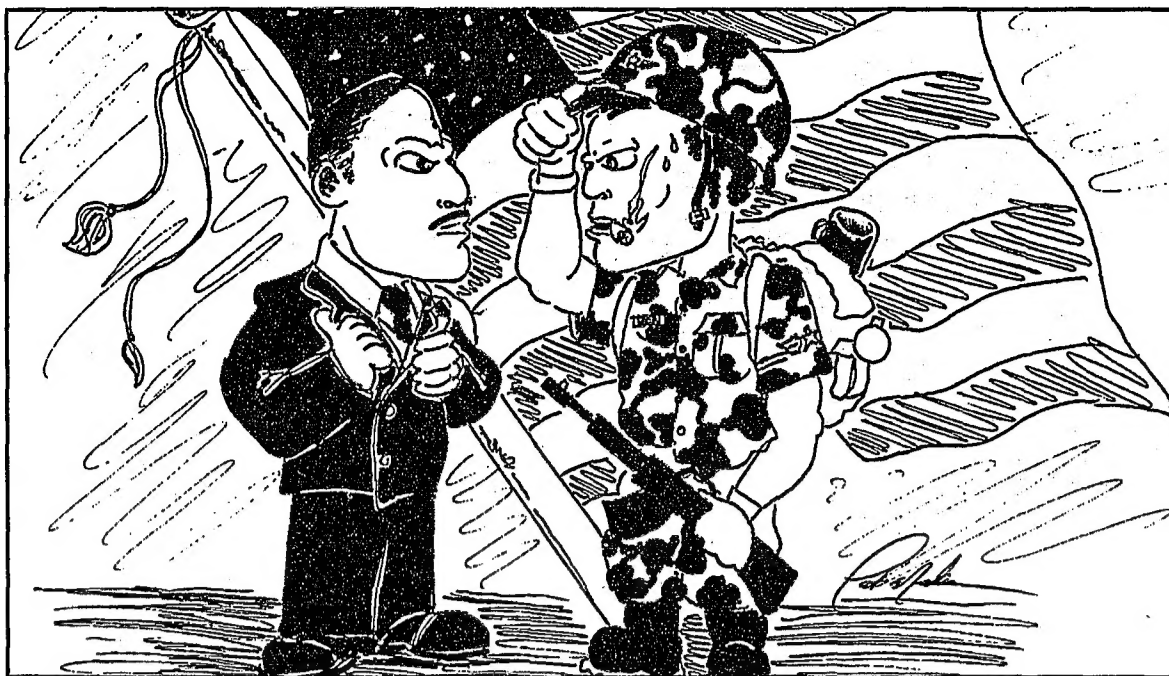

You're in a hurry, so you go through the drive thru to get some koffee.

At work, you need a snack, so you run to the vending machine to buy a Krackel candy bar or maybe a Rice Krispy treat. Fortunately, you had the right coins for it.

After work, you run a few errands. You go to the FotoMart to pick up the pictures from that basketball game you went to. What was the name of that team, the Starzz?

And you need to pick up some all-purpose Kleener and some lite bulbs so you stop at Rite Aid. The good news is that you can buy them in the Valu size. But you know you are forgetting something, so you stop at the pay phone and use your FonCard to call home. That's when you remember you need to go to Banc One to cash your check.

Martin Luther King, Jr. versus United States Veterans: Who deserves a national holiday?

Sounds like America needs a spell check. Everywhere you look, somebody is misspelling something to grab your attention.

I'll admit that it does serve its purpose.

Misspellings do grab my attention, but they don't make me want to buy a product. Usually, it scares me away from buying it. I mean, do you really want to trust your money to a bank that doesn't know how to spell "bank?"

Or get your haircut at a place called Kasual Kuts? I don't.

And how about taking something called Cold-Eeeze when you don't feel good?

No thanks. This trend is only going to get worse.

After all, how are the future generations supposed to learn to spell correctly when nobody around them can?

Especially when we send them to a day care center called Kiddie Kollege, wearing Luvs diapers, to play with toys made by a company called Playskool.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the article written by Dustin Pappas printed in The Gateway on Jan. 15, titled "Breckenridge Recovers After Seven Days of SPO."

This article was labeled as a "news article," but in reality, the article was almost completely void of news and rather filled with biased, misleading information that portrayed a negative and false image of the Student Programming Organization's (SPO's) 15th annual winter ski trip.

The purpose of SPO's ski trip, contrary to what Mr. Pappas' article suggests, is not to provide a chance for underage students to spend a week in Colorado drinking and partying. In reality, the trip represents an opportunity for UNO students and members of the community to enjoy an affordable, fun-filled week full of skiing, snowboarding, sightseeing and meeting new people who share common interests.

Mr. Pappas' article is not representative of the 32 students who participated in this year's trip.

The Student Programming Organization is very disappointed at the picture The Gateway painted of the winter ski trip. It was a false interpretation.

SPO hopes UNO students and staff realize that Mr. Pappas' article does not portray what the ski trip is really about.

If this is the type of "objective" news reporting that we can expect from The Gateway, the next time a reporter asks us for a quote, SPO's answer will be "no comment."

Sincerely,

The Student Programming Organization Executive Board

The Sweet Taste of iMarketing

Apple computers recently released, in addition to their first G3 Bondi Blue colored computer, colored, or flavored, iMacs.

These computers match the look of the first iMac, but are now offered in five flavors: grape, strawberry, lime, tangerine and blueberry.

What does this mean to Americans, and specifically, to Apple CEO Steve Jobs?

The computer's role in American homes has changed as we know it.

Gone are the days when your home computer matches the color of your driveway. Farewell, Apple said, to solid color monitors and blasé colored mice.

This idea to actually give color to a computer was a wise one on Apple's part.

Consumers now see the computer not as a gray sign of technology, but a colorful and fun addition to their home; almost like a home appliance, tailored to their liking.

And, when consumers like what they see, they'll spend their dollars to see more of it.

Buy a grape and really wanted a lime? Treat yourself, Apple says. In fact, at MacWorld, the week-long Macintosh convention in San Francisco, Jobs recently encouraged consumers to "collect all five."

Apple has changed America's perception of computers.

When I saw the iMacs in their five flavors, I used the word "cute" to describe them.

"Cute," to describe a computer? Of course. And Apple computers like that.

Hello, marketing.

If a purple computer, for example, was released last year, most people would not bat an eye. Some would consider purchasing, but a purple computer? Never. A purple computer is too much of a commitment. But, if they made a green computer...

Apple's creativity and marketing skills allowed them to tap in to what Americans want.

Variety allows for a more tailored computer: enjoy the convenience and reliability of the iMac but personalize it.

Apple didn't stop at personalized desktop photos, but entire system colors.

And it's working.

The iMac is the number one homeselling computer in the history of computers.

Hello, marketing.

And, at $29.99 a month to own an iMac ("the cost of two pizzas" Apple boasts), technology, fun technology, couldn't be more affordable.

With the information super-highway exceeding the speed limit, it's easy to be left in the dust. The internet allows us to find anyone in the United States, chat with them toll-free for hours and even print a street map that gives directions right to someone's doorstep. Some of the fastest growing trends on the net (computer lingo for "internet") have been on-line shopping, free music and making new friends.

Entertainment has also been hit by the computer revolution.

For example, the digital versatile disc (DVD) trend will send VCR tapes into a box of cassette tapes at the local Goodwill as we head into the new millennium.

DVDs work like a CD except they can play movies. Digital disks hold more information, have higher quality and save you the inconvenience of rewinding rental movies.

If only technology could take care of late fees.

In 2004, Cable TV will also convert over to an industry standard digital format.

Even if you don't have a phone jack or a computer, the technology revolution is still beating on your door. In Europe, many countries are starting to convert their currency over to SmartCards, which are small computer chips that fit into your wallet.

SmartCards can also hold financial information, personal identification and an address book. The U.S. is waiting to see how the cards fare overseas before they consider them. The SmartCards would be an imposing threat to national credit card companies.

These are only three of the many ways that the world is revolving around the click of a mouse. But don't worry. That's what I'm here for; to answer your computing questions so we may all apprehend the world of tomorrow.

E-mail your questions to me at computerguy@gateway.unomaha.edu or drop them by the Gateway office located on the first floor of the Milo Bail Student Center.

makes him an unorganized person. "I would rather have a nice house and dirty car than a nice car and a dirty house," Anderson said.

As for the cars of other students, Anderson said it depends on what the person has in the car before he labels it as messy or not.

Angie Rodda, a UNO freshman and criminal justice major, claims she is a very clean and organized person and blames the nasty winter weather for the sand and mud that creeps in her car.

"The winter is the only time my car gets dirty," she said. "I usually try and make time to clean out my car so that it doesn't become a mess."

Even though Rodda prides herself on having a clean car, she said it doesn't bother her when she rides in another person's dirty car.

"I consider my car to be cluttered," Mark Henrichierin, UNO senior respiratory therapist major, said. "It doesn't help out that my dog rides in my extended cab, along with my daughter and tools. I eat in the vehicle and the fast food trash gets left in there."

Henrichierin doesn't let his truck get dirty to the extent that he is embarrassed to let someone ride with him.

"I don't believe that just because someone has a dirty car automatically means they are unorganized," Henrichierin said. "I believe there is a point where people go overboard. I knew a person who had to have his car waxed and spotless each week."

Henrichierin said washing the car once a week, removing clutter and not smoking would all keep cars cleaner and more pleasant to ride in.

Hush Little Baby, Don't Say A Word

UNMC researchers recently conducted a study on how parents prefer to treat their children's bedtime problems, and there were some noisy findings.

Three "cry it out" approaches were most popular in a survey of 2,000 parents in the Omaha area who sought help for their children's sleeping problems. The results contradict previous studies that have shown that parents would rather not use the "cry it out".

"Parents presenting to sleep clinics are more likely to have unsuccessfully tried the 'cry it out' approach," Brett Kuhn, Ph.D., assistant professor, pediatric and a psychologist at the Munroe-Meyer Institute at UNMC. "It was my hunch that many parents in the general populations use this approach successfully and find it a reasonable method for their children," he said.

In the study, Dr. Kuhn first presented parents with the scenario of a two-and-a-half-year old child who never sleeps through the night, cries when put to bed, frequently awakens and has difficulty going back to sleep after waking up. Parents were then asked to rank how effective the following eight methods would be in that situation, on a scale of 9 (least effective) to 45 (most effective):

Poor Spelling May Have Stemmed from Childhood

Don't forget every little kid's favorite drink, Kool-Aid.

Maybe we should just take them to Toys 'R Us to buy a Lite Brite or some Play-Doh.

Maybe we should give them a reward for spelling things right — how about a Rain Blo lollipop?

It's obvious that it's too late for my generation.

We're the ones that like to watch the Xtreme games as we are drinking our Hi-NRG drinks or our Mello Yellow. We like to listen to music by bands like Phish, Boyz II Men, 'N Sync or Blessid Union of Souls.

We're the ones who go and see movies called Antz. And instead of creating our own slang, we've just misspelled words to make them into new ones.

We're the ones that have playas.

And if we like you, you're either phat or kewl.

Some businesses misspell to be cute. Or is that kute?

I can't tell anymore. For some strange reason, they think all the words in their name should start with the same letter.

Take for example the name of a restaurant in rural Ohio, Korner Kafe.

Then again, if they had spelled it right, it would be Corner Cafe.

I guess I'm wrong. Misspellings must be kute.

I wonder why none of my professors think that. One would think that with all the technology we have today, misspellings would never happen.

After all, everything is done on computers, which can highlight all the misspelled words for you (like its done for about half of the words in this article).

Then again, in the future we won't need spell check.

At some point, misspellings are going to be so common that nobody will even notice. People will only take notice when things are spelled right.

Imagine this:

Little Johnny: Teacher, why did you mark this word wrong?

Teacher: Johnny, you spelled it S-C-H-O-O-L.

Little Johnny: But that's right.

Teacher: I know that. What's your point?

Little Johnny: If I spelled it right, now can it be wrong?

Teacher: Johnny, we don't spell things right anymore. Therefore your right answer is actually a wrong answer. If you spelled it wrong, it would be right.

Businesses need to start realizing that they are doing more harm than good. They need to realize that spelling things incorrectly doesn't make them look good. It makes them look stupid.

Businesses need to start giving us more credit. We're smarter than they think.

Most Americans recognize when something is spelled wrong. They laugh

People need to look at the overall view, he said. "If you're not going to look for it, you're not going to see it."

Many students feel that the day off will raise awareness of King's life and contributions.

"It lets people know that he's being recognized," said freshman Shannon Jones, an African American student.

Senior Kyle Jones, who is Caucasian, agreed.

"If students came to school, they might not even know that it's Martin Luther King Day. The day off promotes awareness of it," she said.

Their points were illustrated by the fact that some students were unaware that there were no classes Monday. Others saw it as a day to catch up on their sleep.

But Conyers hopes students see the day as more than that.

"I would hope they would look at the bigger picture, and not minimize it," he said.

Parents Use "Cry It Out" Approach To Soothe Children

1. Graduated extinction—A "cry it out" approach in which the parent delays checking on the child and then gradually increases the time interval between checks. (scored 32 of 45 points)

2. Extinction with quick check acceptability—A "cry it out" approach similar to the above method, except the parents enter the child's bedroom and briefly check on the child's well-being at pre-planned intervals (every 10 minutes). (scored 31 of 45 points)

3. Scheduled awakenings—The parent charts the child's awakening patterns for one week. The parent then wakes the child 15 to 30 minutes prior to an expected awakening and does what he or she normally does when the child awakens, such as rub the child's back. The time between scheduled awakenings is gradually increased until they can be eliminated. (scored 28 of 45 points)

4. Extinction—A "cry it out" approach in which the parent ignores the crying until the child falls asleep. (scored 27 of 45 points)

5. Faded bedtime with response-cost—Identify the bedtime when the child is likely to fall asleep, then set the bedtime earlier or later by 30 minutes each subsequent night based on how quickly the child falls asleep. Remove the child from the bedroom if he or she is not asleep within 15 to 30 minutes and wait 30 minutes before giving the child another opportunity to fall asleep. (Scored 26 of 45 points)

6. Extinction with parental presence—The parent remains in the room ignoring the child and pretending to be asleep while gradually working way out of the bedroom. (scored 25 of 45)

7. Bed-sharing—The child sleeps in the parents bed every night, for the entire night. (scored 21 of 45 points)

8. Sedative medication—A prescription drug is administered to the child to make him or her drowsy. (Scored 18 of 45 points)

The results of Dr. Kuhn's study will be presented at the Association of Professional Sleep Societies next June at a conference in Orlando.

He is also studying how children's sleep disturbances affect of the stress level of parents.

The loss of sleep can be exhausting, especially for college students.

However, it is amazing how little sleep you can actually get by on, said Doug Larsen, while chasing his little boy around the UNO Food Court.

For more information about children's sleep disorders, call 559-6408.

greek advisor at UNO, she was ecstatic.

As the greek advisor for UNO, Treadway has been involved in talking to chapter presidents on issues including risk management, safe social functions and hazing.

Treadway said her job has been very rewarding.

"From when I started, I've seen a higher retention rate and overall better grades from the greek system. Some of the people I started working with were only second year students and have since graduated."

While Treadway has mixed emotions about leaving Omaha, she is glad to be moving on.

"MIT hopefully will create some challenges," she said. "Sometimes it's good to move on."

Treadway applied for the job over the summer, but put it out of mind until she was called for an interview. The position is new to MIT, and Treadway thinks her experience here has helped prepare her for MIT.

With Treadway's upcoming departure, UNO students can welcome Bobbi Larson as the new greek advisor. Larson will work part-time until the May. UNO will then begin a search for a permanent advisor.

A lot of universities have been significantly higher than UNO. It's pretty reasonable I think," Byrd said.

John Farr, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs feels that although institutional research does not directly involve students, they can still benefit from the departments work.

"I don't think there's a direct involvement with students," Farr said. "It provides information to various university offices in support of decision making regarding functions and activities that involve students and in turn has a big indirect influence. The Institutional Research department will help the academic affairs committee make better informed decisions, and better informed decisions benefits us all," Farr said.

Byrd encourages students to come in with their questions or suggestions as to how UNO could improve.

"I'd be glad to hear from them. How much I can do I can't make any promises, but I can be an advocate for students," said Byrd. "It's really no different from the dean's or the chancellor's perspective. I'm sure they all would like to know how they can meet the needs of students," he said.

The Mavericks have outscored their last three opponents by a combined 14-4 margin.

Did anybody else find it ironic that Maverick forward Nick Fohr would score his first collegiate goal on a four-on-four?

After the Saturday night game, Falcon head coach

Frank Serratore never signed the official score-sheet. Serratore wouldn't sign it after a penalty was listed against one of his players as a game disqualification instead of a game misconduct. The difference is that with a disqualification, the penalized player misses the next game.

The Mavericks are headed out on the road this week, Wednesday to be exact. That's when they leave for Seattle for a one-night stay before flying up to Fairbanks, Ala. for their two-game series with the Nanooks of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association (CCHA). They'd better pack warm clothes with them. Early weather reports have a high of -16 degrees Thursday with the low a bone-chilling -24 degrees. They might as well include a case of Jolt Cola as well. The games start at 7 p.m. Alaska Standard Time, which is three hours behind Omaha.

Wrestlers Upset at St. Cloud State

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The Maverick wrestling team, ranked No. 2 in just about every poll, stumbled against No. 16 St. Cloud State Saturday night in Hallenbeck Hall in St. Cloud.

The key to St. Cloud pulling off its 23-16 upset win was a pair of consecutive pinfalls. At the 125-pound weight class, the Mavericks' Mack LaRock got his shoulders pressed to the mat by St. Cloud's Allan Luke at 6:56. Luke, in his first match of the year beat the No. 2 wrestler in Division II in that class.

The next wrestler to fall was T. J. Brummels as he got pinned 90 seconds into his match with Aaron Sanders in the 133-pound class. Those two pins cost the Mavericks 12 team points and became too much to overcome.

In a mild upset, Ryan Marx got past Jose Medina in the 197-pound match 3-

Sidoruk Shuts Out Falcons 4-0 Saturday

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

For the eighth time this season, the UNO Mavericks were involved in a series sweep. This time, the Mavericks broke out the brooms and swept Air Force with a 4-0 win Saturday night in Omaha's Civic Auditorium.

"I felt they took it to us physically in the first period," Maverick forward Nick Fohr said, "after that we had a lot of room to work."

The Mavericks were backed by strong goaltending from junior netminder Kendall Sidoruk as he stopped all 18 Falcon shots he saw.

"It's always nice. It's every goalie's goal. I felt focused for the full 60 and just didn't want to let up," Sidoruk said.

The game was dominated by UNO in the first period as they kept play in the Falcons' zone and put a lot of pressure on Air Force's Marc

Kielucki making his second straight start in net for head coach Frank Serratore. The Mavericks put 16 shots on him in the first 20 minutes but Kielucki was up to the task and made several key saves to keep the game deadlocked at 0-0. At the other end of the ice, Sidoruk made six saves in the first period.

The first goal of the game came in the second period and was a short-handed tally.

Women Split Weekend Action

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The Maverick women's basketball team split their games with South Dakota State and Augustana in the Sapp Fieldhouse.

Friday night, the Mavericks weren't able to overcome conference-leading South Dakota State and lost 74-66.

The Mavericks looked like they were going to win based on their play in the first half. They came out shooting and hit 17-of-35 shots from the floor and blazed their way out to a 39-28 lead at the half.

During halftime, South Dakota State regrouped and showed why they are the team in first place. They got the hot shooting hand and hit 17-of-32 in the second half, including four three-pointers, and rolled the Mavericks 46-27 in the half to get the win. The Mavericks hit just nine-of-31 from the floor in the second half.

Freshman guard Jennifer Mitchell paced the Mavericks with 18 points on the night. Kim Birkle and Jenny DeSmet each added 12 while Amy Soenen scored eight points and ripped down 10 of the Mavericks' 45 rebounds.

South Dakota State's Lora Kluis led all scorers with 26 points on 13-for-18 shooting from the floor. South Dakota State also got a double-double (16 points and 10 rebounds) from Jennifer Sylvester in the win.

The next night brought the Mavericks a win but they had to work a little overtime for it, two extra periods to be exact.

The Mavericks and Augustana were deadlocked at 64-64 after regulation and went to overtime to try and find a winner.

Five minutes later, the same situation arose again. The teams were tied, this time at 74-74 and had to sion but their combined efforts just weren't enough.

wants to cut down on how many points the team is allowing.

The Mavericks were simply beaten by size. Northern Colorado's team was twice the size of the Maverick squad and were able to swim more people in an event. The 1000-yard freestyle was an example of that. Amber Ripa was the lone Maverick in the event and she had to take on three Bears.

Races like that were how Northern Colorado jumped out to a 45-9 lead after three events.

The Mavericks came back and won three of the next five events and closed the gap to 87-61.

First, Tasha Soby won the 100-yard backstroke in 1:01.16 to get thing started. Jamie Haferbier posted a win in the 100-yard breaststroke (1:09.76) and the Mavericks started to draw closer. Haferbier's time was enough to establish herself with a national qualifying time for the meet in March.

Then, Aimee LaFave beat the Bears in the 200-yard butterfly to help close the gap to 66-44, Northern Colorado still in the lead.

Northern Colorado got some of its lead back in the 50-yard freestyle before Aja Wurth won the one-meter diving competition with a school record and national qualifying 417.90 points. Wurth also placed second on the three-meter board, less than a point out of first.

After that, Northern Colorado's team size and depth took over as they broke the meet open. What was a 26-point lead halfway through the meet, swelled to a 53-point cushion in just five events' time.

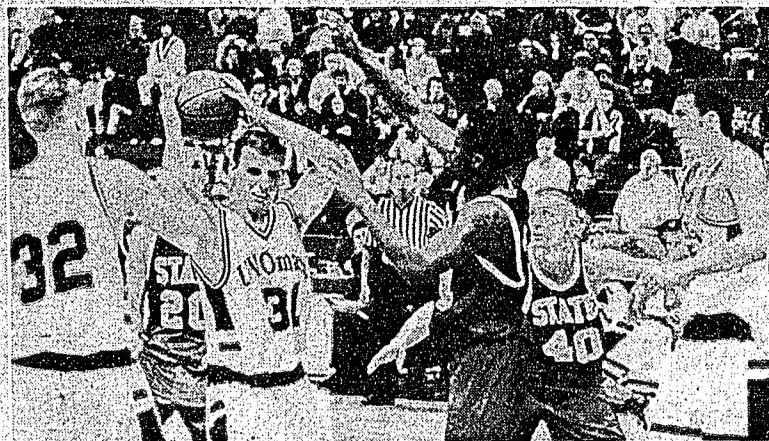

Steph Patterson was the other Maverick winner on the day when she took the 100-yard butterfly in 1:02.79.

The team finished its dual season 8-2 and also won the Jackrabbit Invitational in an all-around successful dual part of the season.

"I didn't think we'd do that well. I'm happy with how we did," Samland said.

The Mavericks will have a couple weeks to practice before they head to St. Louis for the Washington Invitational on Jan. 29-30.

No. 31 Mike Simons fights for a rebound Friday against South Dakota State, while No. 32 Alan Laine looks on. Simons broke the school record for career three-pointers Friday night.

scoring with his fourth of the year after he made his own opportunity. Noel-Bernier was forechecking on the penalty kill when he stripped Air Force defenseman Dan Davies in the high slot. Noel-Bernier faked right, cut back left and tucked the puck behind Kielkucki.

"It's always nice to help the team like that," Noel-Bernier said. He also said that he used the same move on his other breakaway goals where he throws a shoulder fake to the right, cuts back left and then scores. Noel-Bernier's shot was one of 12 Maverick shots in the period while Air Force hit Sidoruk with another six shots for a two-period total of 12.

The Mavericks salted the game away with a three-goal third period with the first goal coming at the 9:37 mark and it was Fohr's first collegiate tally. Fohr's goal was on a four-on-four. He took a pass from Derek Reynolds in the corner and one-timed it behind Kielkucki.

"The second goal was more of a backbreaker," Falcon head coach Frank Serratore said. "The first one, ouch, but if we win the third period we're in overtime."

Fohr had his own take on the goal.

"Rennie was hustling in the corner there was a big void there and I found the soft spot, Rennie put it where he had to. I didn't even aim it. I just fired it."

The lead swelled to 3-0 less than a minute later when Tom Kowal lit the lamp at 10:07. Kowal was left alone at the top of the slot and launched a low missile into the net for a power play goal.

The final goal came at 19:06 off of the stick of captain Jeff Edwards when he picked up a loose pick in front of Kielkucki and tucked it along the ice and into the net.

"Clearly, the better team won. Last night they were lucky as we didn't capitalize on some of their bonehead mistakes," Serratore said.

The Mavericks will need to pack their long Johns with their three-game winning streak as they play at Alaska-Fairbanks Friday and Saturday while the Falcons head back home for two games with Niagara.

Track Team Wins 13 Events at Doane

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The Maverick track team won 13 events in Saturday's Ward Haylett Invitational in Crete, Neb. en route to an easy win...if the meet was scored. The team did quite well in the field events. Jamie Cason won the weight throw with a mark of nearly 47 feet. She also finished fourth in the shot put with a throw of nearly 40 feet. Sandy Derby rose above the field in the high jump as she cleared 5-foot-8-inches. Rochelle Gordon was second in the long jump with a leap of 17 feet and two inches. Gordon also leapt her way to the top of the triple jump chart as she registered a 36-foot effort to win. On the track, it was business as usual for the Mavericks. In the mile, Tara Biltoft and Niki Dorcas finished one-two for the Mavericks with Becky Goltz fifth. Double the distance to two miles and Michelle Patterson can be found atop the final standings. She broke the tape and won the race in 11:43.94. LaShonte Reynolds and Derby placed second and fourth, respectively, in the 60-yard high hurdles. If you take away the hurdles, you have the 60-yard dash where Carly Lambert won the race in 7.26 seconds. Teammates Karisa Foight and Keonna Shaw also finished in the top six. The Mavericks finished one-three-five in the 600-yard run with Katie McDonnell leading the way with her winning time of 1:33.86. Amy Parsons was third at 1:35.98 and Janelle Treat came home fifth in 1:37.31. In the 440-yard run, Derby and Missy Dammann finished one-two for the Mavericks with Derby winning in 59.23 seconds. The 300-yard dash was another event that the Mavericks won and Kelly Koziol was first across the line in 38.5 seconds. Sharon Tate was second, just 0.1 seconds behind Koziol. Dorcas and Treat placed first and third, respectively, in the half-mile run with Dorcas winning in 2:28.04. With all of the individual winning, the Mavericks also showed they can work together as a team as they swept the relays on the day. In the 4x880-yard relay, the team of Shannon Williams, April Scheer, McDonnell and Amy Parsons won in 9:45.51, a time 10 seconds ahead of second place Concordia. The 4x440-yard relay team of Tate, McDonnell, Koziol and Parsons produced a win in 4:07.85, three seconds ahead of host Doane. The distance medley relay squad also won Saturday with Derby, McReynolds, Goltz and Biltoft winning in a time of 12:51.55. On the whole, the meet turned out to be a rather easy one as the Mavericks plowed through the field. That won't be the case this weekend when the Mavericks travel to Lincoln, Neb. and run with the pack in the Nebraska Open.

play another overtime to find a winner. In the second overtime, the Mavericks pulled away from Augustana, outscoring them 11-7 in double overtime and sealing an 85-81 win.

Mitchell was the key to the Mavericks' success. She was unstoppable as she scored 32 points on the night, pulled down eight rebounds and dished out four assists in 45 minutes.

Mitchell also went nine-for-10 from the free-throw line on the night.

Mitchell's 32 took some of the spotlight away from Sarah Larson who scored 21 on the night with eight rebounds of her own.

In addition, both Soenen (10 points, 10 rebounds) and DeSmet (10 points, 11 rebounds) had double-doubles on the night in the winning effort. Those efforts helped to overcome five Augustana players in double figures.

The Mavericks (8-9 overall, 3-5 in the North Central Conference, sixth place) head to Greeley, Colo. to take on the Bears in a one-game road trip. The Bears are 11-7 overall, 5-3 in the NCC and fresh off of a split over the weekend.

Mavericks Down Air Force 6-2

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The UNO Maverick hockey team has back-to-back wins for the first time since Feb. 13-14, 1998 with a 6-2 win over Air Force Friday night in the Omaha Civic Auditorium. The win also marks the first time the Mavericks have won on a Friday night all season.

The Mavericks opened the scoring at 7:06 of the first period as James

Chalmers got the first of his two goals on the night off of a feed from Kyle O'Keefe who picked up the assist on the play.

The Air Force Falcons came roaring back with two goals in 33 seconds to seize a lead.

First, Justin Kieffer found a loose puck in front of Maverick goaltender Jason Mitchell and tapped it into a half-empty net for his ninth goal of the year. The goal came at 11:20 and was assisted by Dan Davies and Scott Bradley.

AirForce took a 2-1 lead when James Ord picked up a fluke goal. Ord was just skating towards the Maverick blueline and instead of dumping it in he fired on Mitchell and beat him at 11:53. Jace Anders picked up the assist on Ord's fourth of the year.

The Mavericks knotted the game at 2-2 when forward Joe Yurecko was in the right place at the right time as he knocked the puck into an empty net from three feet out at 14:51. The net was empty as Allan Carr and Jason White helped to set up a play that would clear out Air Force goaltender Marc Kielucki.

White took a shot on net that was stopped. Carr got the rebound and his shot stretched Kielucki to the left. The rebound went to the front of the net and Yurecko who didn't miss.

Air Force outshot the Mavericks 11-6 in the period but the score was even at 2-2 after 20 minutes.

In the second period, the Mavericks special teams stepped up and made their presence felt.

First, Maverick forward Jeff Hoggan netted a short-handed tally at 9:55 with an unassisted goal for his fourth of the season. Kemp said Hoggan got that goal because of his work ethic.

Chalmers scored his second of the night at the 17:05 mark of the period and this one was a power play strike. The Mavericks were working the puck around the Air Force zone and finally Carr found Chalmers with a pass and Chalmers put it behind Kielkucki.

In the third, Carr took his place in the spotlight with a pair of goals five minutes apart.

First, he surprised Air Force with his goal at 2:51. Carr just came over the bench on a change and skated towards the play. While he did that, Derek Reynolds saw him and fed Carr the puck. Before the Air Force could turn around and notice Carr the puck was on its way into the net. Then Carr struck on the power play at 7:23. Carr took a pretty feed from linemate Shane Glover and tucked it home to close the scoring. Carr's goal was his fourth of the year and second of the night.

"I'm playing with a good team now," Carr said. " (Linemates) Joe (Yurecko) and White are playing well. I'm in the right spot at the right time."

The game was a physical one and hit a boiling point at the 10:07 mark of the third. That was when Maverick captain Jeff Edwards went after Air Force's Kirk Zerkel in the near corner. Edwards got the better of him and 17 penalty minutes to show for it before skating off the ice motioning for a Falcon player to come and get some of him. The downside of that is that the Mavericks had to kill of the five-minute major assessed to Edwards for checking from behind. Add to that Christian Graham going off for interference at 10:25 and Air Force had a golden opportunity to get back in the game despite being down 6-2 at the time.

The Maverick penalty killers wouldn't let Air Force score as they shutdown the five-minute power play including two full minutes of five-on-three hockey.

"The bottom line is...for us to win against a D-I team we have got to score on those (power plays). They played a better 60 minute game then we did," Serratore said. "Tonight we ate a lot of humble pie."

These two teams play again tomorrow night at 7:35 p.m. in the series finale.
